family...and no matter how crazy things got, we ate dinner together as a family. We also taught our kids some basic survival skills (how to do laundry, cook, and manage the allowance) which has helped us along the way.”

Due to her job and family, Chris has limited her “extracurricular” involvement, but serves on the Board of Directors of the Greater Hartford YMCA, which helps “build strong kids, strong families and strong communities through our programs,” she professed.

Chris is also a member of Assumption’s President’s Council and the President’s Council Committee, which helps recruit others to join.

“My contributions to Assumption are payback for the help I was given when I needed it as a student,” she explained. “During my junior year, I approached Tom Dunn (former director of Admissions and Financial Aid) and he helped me find additional money to complete my degree. I’m fortunate to have had a wonderful career and formed several lifelong friendships as a result of my four years at Assumption.”

Priceless indeed. ☻
